SAVS SUPREME TEST HAS COME AND EVERY ONE MUST DO HIS BEST.

FIGHTING ARM EASY MATTER

Each Murt Devote Himself to National Good Without Thought of Advantage or Profit-Organization, Co-operation Necessary.

Washington,-President Wilson has Issued a stirring appeal to the people of the country to co-operate in every way in settling the problems of national and international life resulting from the entry of the United States into the world war. Particularly he arges the farmers to produce toodstuffs to the limit of their acreage and middlemen to forego unusual profits.

"The supreme test of the nation has come," warns the president in calling on every one to do his or her bit "We must all speak, act and serve together."

In his address the president points out that the task confronting the nation, in addition to fighting unselfishly for the rights of mankind and the future peace and security of the world. involves many kinds and elements of capacity and service and self-sacrifice. Abundant Food Supply.

The government, he asserts, will do its full share by putting the navy upon an effective war footing and coaipping a great army, but these are the simplest parts of the great work, he says, which the country has under taken

He stresses the fact that the people must devote themselves to the service "without regard to profit or material advantage, and with an en-children of Pittsburgh to be the first erry and intelligence that will rise to in the country to receive this call, Arthe level of the enterprise itself."

The things that must be done, besides fighting, he enumerates as fol-

for the United States, its armies and seamen, but also for a large part of the nations "with whom we have made a common cause, in whose support and by whose side we shall be fight-

that the eyes of the country will be especially upon them, that the opportunity is presented them for "signal service, efficient and disinterested." The country expects, and, he says, bewill confidently expect the middlemen to "deserve and win the confidence of people of every sort and station."

The men who run the railroads, emplayer and employe, the werehant, the miner, the manufacturer and factory employes, all are placed in the "great service army" by the president and each is urged to do his part.

Protecting Uncle Sam's Mail While in Transit

T TAKES over a million locks to protect Uncle Sam's letters while in transit, and the post office department makes and keeps in repair not alone all of these locks, but also all fastening devices used in the mall service.

Previous to 1889 everything of this nature was furnished and repaired at a great expense by contract, and not always to the complete satisfaction of the department. In that year it was decided to repair the locks, and a small shop was installed in Washington. It was found that the department could do the work not only cheaper but better, and the following year it was decided to enter into the manufacture of locks, keys and mail-bag attachments, as it was believed that it would be an advantage to the department to have its own shop, where orders could be filled more promptly and with less danger of keys getting into the hands of those not entitled to them. From a small room equipped with one drill press and one stamping press and employing a half dozen workmen, the shop has grown to a complete factory. It is equipped with tools and machinery, including a tool and die department, where all tools, dies, ligs, etc., necessary for the converting of sheet steel and brass and other material into locks and keys and other attachments are made; a pressroom with 14 stamping presses, a lock finishing and assembling room, a miscellaneous room, where cord fasteners are assembled and other equipment made, also where hundreds of postal scales are repaired and made as good or better than new each year; a tinning plant, where all mall-bag attachments are tinged to prevent rusting.

that there was no money available for the work required. It is a penal offense for an efficer of the government to spend money for purposes for which there has been no specific appropriation. Mr. Daniels was about to dig down into his own pocket to defray the expense of making the offices habitable when his aid, true to his title, came to his assistance. McCandless, who is a young, stalwart, handsome chap, volunteered his services. He explained that among other things taught him at Annapolis was carpentry and other branches of the mechanic arts. For a week McCandless and his crew have been humping over electric floorplaners at odd moments. His soiled overalls attest the fact that he has not been merely bossing the job, but has been doing his full share of the work. The general navy board was so pleased with McCandless' action that it recommended him for immediate promotion. Secretary Daniels acquiesced and one of the last acts of the senate before the adjournment of the regular session was to approve the nomination, which boosted Lieutenant McCandless to lieutenant commander.

Geologists of the survey say, in connection with this subject, that it is doubtful whether so much investigation and discussion have been destowed on any other subject with such absolute lack of positive results. It is difficult to see, they say, how, for practical purposes, the entire matter could be more thoroughly discredited. It is by no means true that all persons using a forked twig or some other device for locating water or other minerals are intentional deceivers. However, the experts say, as anything that can be deeply velled in mystery affords a good opportunity for swindlers, there can be no reasonable doubt that many of the large group of professional finders of water, oil or other minerals obtain is large. The survey, therefore, when it receives these inquiries, advises against the purchase of any of these services or instruments. In tracing the history of the subject, it has been found that divining rods have been used to locate ore deposits; to discover buried or hidden treasure; to find lost landmarks and re-establish property boundaries; to detect crim inals; to analyze personal character, to cure diseases; to trace lost or strayed domestic animals; to insure immunity against ill fortune; to locate well sites; to trace the courses of underground streams; to determine the amount of water available by drilling at a given spot, and such like.
